SCHOOL CALENDAR

FROM THE PRINCIPAL

Dear members of the Lisieux community,

If a picture paints a thousand words, the following images will tell an amazing story of our first-ever Arts Week. It has been a week of colour, creativity and collaboration, with guest artists-in-residence, incursions and a Year 3/4 excursion linked to the theme. Students have danced, painted, created clay works and stencil art, played marimbas, engaged in role play, storytelling and weaving. It has been a perfect opportunity to develop new skills, take risks, make mistakes and learn more from a range of professional visual and performing artists. The week will culminate with the Gala Launch of our Art Show on Friday evening to which many of you have purchased tickets. The Art Show will continue over the weekend on both Saturday and Sunday between 12pm-4pm. Do come along, bring your friends and neighbours and see our students' art work on display. You will be blown away by their incredible work and there are some stunning pieces you can bid on in the silent auction. Every single student should feel incredibly proud of their achievements!

A special thank you to the following local artists who helped make our week a success: Norm and Nikki from Wurri-culture, Mike McLean, Lauren Barton and Kate Mayes. We are very blessed to have such a supportive community.

God's blessings for the week ahead,

Susan Ryan
Principal

PRAYER

Loving and Creative Father, you created everything in all its beauty! Thank you for creation itself, the most incredible art work of beauty and grandeur. In the world you have breathed life into – the sunrise and sunset, the oceans and rivers, the trees and flowers, wildlife, skies and fields- we are surrounded by magnificent works of art, adding meaning and pleasure to our lives.

Thank you for the talents you so generously entrust to each of us. Guide us in using our talents for the benefit of everyone we meet, and using these gifts to bring a creative spark and new possibilities to our world. Amen

Condolences

We offer our thoughts and prayers to the Merriman family (Brendan, Caroline and Marcus, Year 3) on the death of Brendan's mother, Sheila Mary Merriman. Wishing you peace and the comfort of special memories at this sad time.

STUDENT LEARNING & ACHIEVEMENTS

“Yves Klein painted everything blue and wasn’t sorry” by Fausto Gilberti is a perfect book to review during Arts Week! It is a clever, quirky book about a real life modern artist who decided he would only paint in one colour- blue! His tale is paired with black line illustrations and splashes of blue. Some say it is an offbeat biography of an offbeat artist, with a great message about creativity and individuality. Definitely a great book to read during Arts Week.

TAKE NOTE

Congratulations to Teddy Robertson who recently won a prize for his artwork in the Barwon Water Sustainability Challenge. Teddy's art work was recognised and he was presented with an award by a representative from Barwon Water on Monday.

Next week our Prep-Year 2 students will participate in swimming lessons. All students are required to bring a swimming cap with them each day. It may be a disruptive week for them and some will have challenges with changing clothing, etc. Expect your child to be tired after school and remember they may need additional snacks as they will be burning up plenty of energy.

You are invited to the Annual Lisieux Scholastic Book Fair.

Where: Wayperri Hub

Why is it important for educators to nurture children's creativity?

The Oxford Dictionary defines creativity as 'the use of imagination or original ideas to create something.' Although we often think of creativity in terms of painting and drawing, when we look at the bigger picture, creativity is also an important part of how children interact with one another, approach new situations, respond to challenges and think in innovative ways.

Here we look at the notion of creativity in more detail.

How does creativity benefit children?

Creativity plays an instrumental role in children's mental, emotional and physical development. It helps youngsters to:

- Imagine and create through activities like role-playing and art
- Gain new skills by mixing colours and playing music
- Think in new ways
- Express themselves and explain things to others
- Problem-solving like negotiating practical problems or social disagreements
- Have meaningful experiences
- Think reflectively

As well as offering an artsy outlet, creativity is an important part of growing up. It helps children make sense of the world and teaches them important life skills too.

How can educators promote creativity in an early learning and care environment?

There are many ways that educators can help young children embrace their creativity. And whether that creative spark is encouraged through a child's physical environment, learning opportunities or social interactions, Early Childhood Australia has the following practical suggestions.

To inspire creativity using the indoor and outdoor environment, educators can:

- Offer a variety of open-ended, natural and 'found' materials, and improvise with them
- Provide artsy materials like paint, glue, paper, crayons, pencils and play dough
- Show children attractive objects like shells, baskets and fabric
- Encourage children's sense of responsibility by letting them choose and care for certain equipment, materials or room areas

In terms of learning opportunities, early childhood educators:

- Teach children practical techniques, such as squeezing out just enough paint or making a play dough sculpture that balances on its own
- Offer babies and toddlers sensory experiences, like this 'alphabet soup' sensory bin or 'peek-a-boo' sensory board
- Show them different forms of quality creative expression, from fine art and scientific inventions to tap dance and Renaissance architecture
- Include a variety of music into the curriculum
- Expose children to beautifully written and illustrated books
- Free up large blocks of time for creative activities and spread some projects over days or weeks
- Apply a creative approach to everyday routines like helping children to create a 'Day Care Café' to eat in

To nurture creativity through social interactions, educators can:

- Plan activities where children work with one another and see different viewpoints
- Involve youngsters in solving real world problems and ask them open-ended questions
- Encourage children to come up with their own ideas, answers and interpretations
- Allow children to learn by making mistakes and encourage them to try new things and take the initiative
- Show that they value difference and diversity
- Encourage youngsters when they're thinking or acting creatively
- How can a curious nature benefit older children?
- With creativity comes curiosity, and according to a recent study, a curious nature can benefit school kids from all socio-economic backgrounds.

Researchers at the University of Michigan C.S. Mott Children's Hospital and the Centre for Human Growth and Development looked at data from 6,200 kindergartens and found a link between higher curiosity and better academic achievement.

And although researchers said there is often an 'achievement gap' between children from higher and lower socio-economic backgrounds, this study suggests that curious children from poorer backgrounds performed as well as those from richer backgrounds.

Lead researcher, Prachi Shah says, 'Curiosity is characterised by the joy of discovery and the desire for exploration' and adds that, 'Promoting curiosity is a foundation for early learning that we should be emphasising more when we look at academic achievement.'

. This is all the more reason to promote creativity – and curiosity – in the early learning environment. And with painting and problem-solving comes a world of possibility.
